The Classification Office readily acknowledges Haring's use of artistic tools such as symbolism in conveying ideas and making observations on social phenomena. The Office also acknowledges Haring's status and importance within the art world and his contribution to various groups and causes concerning children. There is also a wealth of information and educational material accompanying the exhibition which helps to explain the context, and to a certain extent, the meaning of this artwork. However, if the requisite cognitive ability to understand this information is missing then the information itself is of little value.

The provisions of the New Zealand Bill of Rights Act 1990 (NZBR Act) have been considered and balanced against the provisions in the Films, Videos, and Publications Classification Act 1993 in order to allow for the widest possible availability of the artwork consistent with law. The restricted classification given to this artwork is considered to balance Parliament's intention to protect the public good from the likelihood of injury against the freedom of expression in s14 of the NZBR Act.
